is embellished with a magnificent likeness of the author, taken from life. It will also prove to be one of the mos salable works ever published, as it is one of the most interesting books that has ever passed through the Press.

Read the following opinion of it from John Grige, e-q., the re-tired Bookseller and Publisher of Philadelphia:

tired Bookseller and Publisher of Philadelphia:

"PHILADRIFHIA, Aug. 12, 1859.

"T. B. Peterson & Incorress—Gentlemen: I notice you are about publishing 'Courtship and Matrimony, with other Sketches from Scenes and Experiences in Social Life,' by Robert Morris, ess.

"From the commencement of my book-selling career, in July, 1816, to the present day, I five taken a deep interest in the distribution of such books as I thought would promote the welfare and happiness of mankind, and I take this opportunity to say, that no book published in this country (with the exception of the Bible) deserves a more general circulation into every family in our country than the book you now have in press.

"The most important part of education, in my opinion, is the cultivation of the heart, and a perusal of this work of our friend Morris will produce much good fruit.

"There is no chapter in it any person will read, but what the man, woman or child will say they are the better after reading min, weman or child warres, and reflecting thereon.

"With very great respect, yours truly, "JOHN GRIGG."

"Your feet."

From the Editorial Columns of The Public Ledger of Sept. 10.

"T. B. Peterson & Brothers have just published a new volume, entitled Courtship and Matrimony, by Robert Morris, esq., faverably known as the editor of 'The Inquirer.' The volume is a series of sketckes, all of which are written to inspire correct moral sentiment in the reader, and to induce reflections which will reter a happy effect over his conduct. They are gracefully written, and will be read with pleasure and profit. The volume contains a magnificent steel portrait of the author, which is an excellent likeness."

known for many years as the enter of the Prinsamplia liquirer.

"The characteristics of Mr. Morris's mind are those of hightoned integrity, clear common sense, and a tendency to present life in its purest, yet most soundly practical aspects. And all these traits, clad in a refined and highly-attractive language, are strongly marked in the work before us. We have seldom seen a book which inspired more sincerely the feelings of respect and regard for the author, so manifest are the moral merits and the sincere desire to do good which appear on every page. It is a matter of real regret that works of exactly this character, free from sectarian feeling or the impulses of mere bookmaking, are so rare. Were there more of them, there would be more respect for that class of literati who do not pander merely to 'excitement.'

to 'excitement.'

"This is in every respect a Family Book—one intended for every day realing—one which no family should be without, and which cannot be a familiar immate of any family without inspiring more or less good feeling and sensible reflection in the hearts of all who look into it."

Copies of either edition of the above work will be sent to any person, to any part of the United States, free of postage, on heir remitting the price of the edition they may wish, to the publishers, in a letter postpaid.

Message D. Appleron & Co. New-York.

Gentlemen: I take much pleasure in certifying that Mr. John Mullaly was with us in the Newfoundland Telegraph Expedition in the year 1855, and that he was on board the Niagara during the Atlantic Telegraph Expedition in 1857-8; that he was present at the trial trip in June last, and the final expedition which terminated in the successful landing of the cable in Trinity Bay, Newfoundland, on the 5th of August, 1858.

His indefatigable exertions during all this time in procuring every fact in connection with the enterprise are deserving of the highest praise.

I have the fullest confidence in his narrative with regard to every incident that took place on board the Niagara during the process of laying the cable, and I will continue to furnish him with every information in my power relating to the formation, progress, and success of the Atlantic Telegraph Enterprise.

I remain, gentlemen, very truly your friend.

Mr. Mulialy, having accompanied us on the two Atlantic Telegraph Expeditions of 1837-58, alluded to above by Mr. Field, had every opportunity, of which he availed himself to the inmost, to procure the fullest details in regard to the Atlantic Telegraph Enterprise.

Aledical. THE FIRST STEP.-Oliver Goldsmith ence

THE FIRST STEP.—Oliver Goldsmith ence the appreciated a very natural wonder that people should persist in dying, when so many inventions and discoveries, placarded on the walls and paraded in the newspapers, could core every ill and adjument to which humanity is subject. Why don't you all go to the shope of your benefactors and he healed! The price is small—the result certain—at least, so say the advertisements. The poet who "touched nothing that he did not adorn," probably widom touched the healing wonders to which he alleded, and possibly was not over credulous in believing all he read about them. Still, the number of the "faithful" was then numerous, and those who sold their potions, pills and powders at least cured themselves of poverty, while their patients doubtless got rid of their credulity! But not in all cases. At the period when "The Good Natured Man" and "The Deserted Village" first moved to laughter and tears, broad letters on the wells and announcements in the papers told the wonders of medical preparations, that in our own day are more universally educated, and more extensively used, than one hundred years ago. and more extensively used, than one hundred years ago. The original proprietors, who were not poets, to make each of the name, like Goldsmith, a household word, have left us their Pills and Powders as household remedies, now embalmed in officinal preparations of the pharmacopais, and hourly prescribed by the most competent and conscientious physicians of our day and generation. The world has recognized the real value of these articles that "etill live," and the dectors have forgotten that they were once called "Patent Medicines," and their parentees dignified by the suphonious title of Chacke! In a word, the greater number of the most important and valuable remedies of the modern physician—remedies on which has relies to restore lost beath and to ave feeting lite—were once nothing more nor less than Patent Medicines. This is about the property of the property of the property of the control of the present than can be imagined, and relies to restote lost freath and to saw needing inserver occurs mething more nor less than Patent Medicines. This is absolutely true to a much greater extent than can be imagined, and he history of almost any of the improvements in medical knowledge since medicine has been called a science will fully and substantially prove the assertion. The "Faculty." who have the convenient faculty of seeing the plainest matters through the mist and mystery of professional spectacles, may not be disposed to admit the above assertions. But they are nevertheless, not the less true. The world did move, though all the learned men denied it! And the medical world is being improved on the old-fashioned plan even now. We do not desire to specify what Shake spears calls "modern instances," and we know not whether the "Life Pilla" of Dr. Dye, the "Gennine Sarrapprila" of the Original Swillem, or the "Bitters" of Prof. Sweet, will be remembered when their founders are forgotten. But if they are really mentiones and whable, the world will hold them in memory, and their use become permanent, like the deserving of their predecessors.
